

Here are the SIC codes - standard industrial classifications - codes used to identify and categorise types of industry and businesses in Europe. These classifications effectively replaced the UK 1980 SIC industrial classifications coding in 1992, and since then have been the European standard. The SIC codes remain an essential reference tool in the analysis, targeting and formulation of marketing strategy, particularly for business-to-business organisations, and for the statistical analysis, measurement and reporting of business and trading activity by authorities and statistical bodies. Statistics are available from various sources showing market sizes, numbers of employees, growth and trends, etc. A full up-to-date copy of the SIC standard industrial classifications (additional codes are added from time to time) is available in various formats from the British government agency The Stationery Office (TSO - was HMSO).
